

Hello Mark,

Terry O'Reilly here. As you may or may not know, I'm a Sudburian by birth, as is my wife. Our families are still in Sudbury.

As you know only too well, the Super Stack has long been a symbol of Sudbury and its mining past. I noted with interest that the stack may come down, or it might be able to be re-purposed - and contacted Cameron Cross.

Take a look at Cameron's work. He is an artist who can turn something as industrial as a smoke stack not only into a work of art, but a landmark. I think one of the greatest things about Cameron's work is his understanding of scale. His ideas are big and so are his art pieces.

I would love to see the Super Stack become a much talked about and admired landmark. I always say that every city needs business and tourism revenue - and attention is the oxygen of business. Imagine the press a transformation like this could generate.

Hope you consider it.

All the best,

Terry O'Reilly
